About DAHAB

DAHAB

South Sinai

● TIMELESS

Time flies... This is how our city was named! Many years ago, Bedouins (tribes) used to come to Dahab to relax and disconnect. They felt that in this very small town, time just flies. Flies in Arabic is “Zahab”, and thanks to our Egyptian Arabic dialect, it became “Dahab”. So bottom line, there is a high chance you will fall in love and get stuck here hahaha.

● PAUSED

Dahab has now developed into a small, coastal hippie town in the South of the Sinai peninsula, Egypt. It is considered a cheap all year round destination for travellers who want a break from big cities and connect with nature.

● PARADISE

Dahab's magical landscape makes the perfect spot for tourists and digital nomads alike. Its environment delivers many options for water and land related activities.

It's clear, calm sea for divers, its wind makes a paradise for wind and kite surfers, and the mountains for the climbers and hikers.

● GOLDEN

Dahab is also a meeting point for spirituality and art. This community helps discover and understand different philosophies and spark creativity. Maybe you will discover a new passion by joining a yoga or meditation class, or simply listening to the sound of the sea?

Speaking of the sea - when the sun stands low, it reflects the sun, shimmering in a shiny golden colour, which might explain why Zahab (remember... 'time flies') became Dahab meaning "gold" in Arabic.

● AUTHENTIC

Given that Dahab used to be a Bedouin fishers village, life of the local community still focuses on simplicity, as you can see in the streets and taste in the delicious traditional food - ask us about our favourites but be sure to try Mandi and Falafel.
